-- INTRODUCTION --

Many associations, societies, and organizations provide a variety of educational resources. The Bureau of Junior College Vocational-Technical Education has compiled a directory listing various groups that Junior College Vocational-Technical Personnel may want to contact to determine what educational resources they have available that would be of value for a college vocational-technical program. It is anticipated by the bureau staff that the directory will provide assistance to junior college personnel responsible for planning and operating their vocational-technical programs.

The directory will be periodically updated. In the initial listing many groups may have been overlooked. Associations, societies, or organizations of limited membership which are confined to a particular metropolitan city or limited geographical configuration are not included in the directory. Your suggestions are requested as to groups that should be included or deleted. Undoubtedly, our latest information regarding the names and addresses of the groups listed may be incorrect in some instances. Again, if you know of changes that should be made, please send them to the bureau.

The directory is organized into three major parts, and they are: Specialized Fields, General Listings, and Directory of Directories. The section on Specialized Fields is subdivided into six broad subject-matter fields, and they are: Agricultural Education, Business Education, Health Occupations, Home Economics Education, Industrial and Technical Education, and Public Safety Education.

Special acknowledgement is given to the California Junior College Association, Committee on Relations with Organizations Other Than Schools, (CROOTS) for it was this committee that suggested that such a Directory be prepared.

Members of the Bureau of Junior College Vocational-Technical Education who have contributed their suggestions, assistance, and cooperation in compiling this information are:
